MIGRANT ADULT BASIC EDUCATION PROJECT
ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY

INTRODUCTION

The Migrant Adult Basic Education Project (MABE) is a Special 309 Project funded by the Bureau of Special and Continuing Education of the State Education Department in Albany, New York. The project was designed to provide literacy instruction to migrant adults during their residence in New York State from July 1, 1977 through June 30, 1978.

The project utilized the delivery services, the administrative structure, the curriculum resources, and the instructional specialists of New York State Migrant Tutorial Programs. The State University Colleges at Brockport, Fredonia, Geneseo, New Paltz, Oneonta, Oswego and the Suffolk County BOCES served as the centers through which the adult basic education services were provided.

Even though there may be existing adult basic education programs in an area, it remains exceedingly difficult for the migrant population to be integrated into a program with any degree of success. Some of the obstacles preventing migrant adults from participating in programs include: lack of transportation, refusal to return to the physical setting of a school building because of negative connotations connected to the institution, fear of ridicule in group settings, fear of failure, and lack of available programs at appropriate times. The Migrant Adult Basic Education Project utilized the individualized or small group in-home or in-camp tutorial model to provide educational services to the migrant population in an attempt to meet the real need of the migrant adult learner.

Thanks to the efforts and dedication of many individuals, the following annotated bibliography for the Statewide MABE Project has been completed. A variety of high-interest, low-vocabulary materials are listed for reading, math, "survival" skills, and consumer economics and a number of teacher resource books are included. Missing information regarding reading level, suitability, and cost may be obtained directly from the publishing companies.
